Summer Holiday Workshop: Charlie Higson Zombie Film Trailer Day

Create a Zombie Film Trailer in a Day!

Tuesday 20 August

Suitable for ages 10 – 15

10am – 5pm

£25 per person

(light refreshments supplied)

Bring a packed lunch

Tickets booked through the BFI Box Office: 020 7928 3232 (open from 11.30am – 8.30pm)

Charlie Higson has launched a film trailer competition! The idea of the competition is to make a cinema style trailer for his new book, The Fallen.

If you haven't read the books, they take place in London a year after a mystery disease has ripped apart everyone over the age of 14. Most adults have been killed straight away but some – the unlucky ones – are still alive.

Crazed and deformed by the disease, their bodies and brains eaten away, they roam the empty streets searching for the only source of fresh food still available to them – children. The children call the diseased adults 'sickos', but they behave like classic cannibal zombies.

Sign up for a 'trailer day' here at the BFI where you can spend the day filming a trailer to submit to the competition – great prizes could be won! More information at www.the-enemy.co.uk

Please note: These are open to children and parents as they require adult participants as well as children being part of the action. Children can be left for the day if parents decide not to stay.

Make up will be used which is non-toxic and vegetable based.

Tutors and assistants are CRB Certificated.
